Explore the Future of Digitization Efficiency

Join us November 6th at our 2025 Cultural Heritage Roundtable as we bring together esteemed presenters & experts to share the latest in Cultural Heritage digitization news, developments, standards, technology, and techniques, along with a full day of networking with CH peers.

After listening to feedback from our global audience around timing, location, and budgets, we're excited to announce that this year's Cultural Heritage Roundtable will be fully online—making it easier than ever for cultural heritage professionals everywhere to attend.

What started as small, client-focused gatherings has evolved into an international annual conference bringing together experts, practitioners, and innovators from galleries, libraries, archives, museums, corporations, and even the world of sports and entertainment. Attendees gain exclusive access to the latest digitization technologies, best-practice workflows, and inspiring case studies while connecting with peers across industries.

DT Annual Roundtable Background

Our Cultural Heritage Roundtables began as small, one-off gatherings between Digital Transitions and our valued customers and partners as a formal way to gather the community's collective experience, share the latest knowledge and solutions, and foster a discussion on how to push our efforts forward.

Since its inception, the event has grown from a single day at our office to two annual conferences—both in-person and online—across the United States. Attendees come from a variety of countries, disciplines, and institutions to see the latest digitization technology, learn best practices from experts, discuss workflow tips, and network with other cultural heritage professionals. Whether you work in galleries, libraries, archives, museums, corporations, media, entertainment, or sports, if you have an interest in preserving culture and history through digitization, this event is for you!

DT Knowledge Resources

We aren't just a commercial entity, we pride ourselves on leading the Cultural Heritage community with resources to learn effective and viable approaches to preserve our history. This is why we have developed free resources for you to learn about the latest in the industry.

Film Scanning Knowledge Center

Digitizing transmissive materials at the highest possible quality can be an intimidating task, so we built this resource to guide you through it. Whether you're aiming to meet image quality standards like FADGI or just looking to get the most detail out of your personal collection, you're in the right place. Dive in for hardware and software solutions, project planning tips, handling considerations, video resources, and much more!

Upcoming Events & Trainings

We have a variety of trainings available to suit your needs for digitization. Whether you are looking to improve your post-processing skills in Capture One, learn invaluable techniques for film scanning, or seeking certification as a digitization operator.

DT Digitization Certification Program

One of our core missions at DT Heritage is to be a knowledge resource for the Cultural Heritage digitization community; helping to foster the spread of information and best practices in an industry that too often relies on individuals figuring out techniques and workflows on their own. As part of that ongoing initiative, earlier this year we launched our DT Digitization Certification Training Program to help educate the Cultural Heritage community on the equipment, software, workflows, and best practices associated with modern digitization.
